Temptation, when it allures us to yield to the Serpent, the Eve, or the Adam, which, theologians say, are to be found in our make up either as triplets, couplets, or units, should be steadfastly resisted, if we would escape seconging; but when one is tempted, by the pleasant sensation that a fire communicates on a cold day, to att peside it and indolge in the comforts it imparts, a different meaning is rightly ascribed to the word, and to accept the luxury is to act wisely, if one does not burn his fingers. That temptations are largely governed by circumstances is conspicuously shown in matters of shopping; when among THE BALES AND CASES AND ARHIND COUNTERS, THE TEMPTATION TO MISREPRESENT, OVERVALUE, &c., finds a more fertile field
